

Non-Technical Roles

Prepared July 2026

Immediate / High Priority

Enterprise Sales Director (MENA)

The Gulf pipeline needs someone on the ground in Dubai or Riyadh who can sell directly to conglomerate founders. This is a relationship sale into a small number of very large deals, not a volume play. Must be comfortable with long sales cycles and C-suite conversations.

Candidate criteria:

- Has closed deals with founder-controlled conglomerates or sovereign entities
- Sells complex, high-value solutions ($500K+ deals, not volume SaaS)
- Based in or has deep networks in Dubai, Riyadh, Abu Dhabi, or Doha
- Experience with 6–18 month enterprise sales cycles into industrial verticals
- Understands supply chain, manufacturing, logistics, or compliance buying centres
- Can sell novel/unfamiliar technology (not just another CRM or ERP reskin)
- Comes from deep tech or industrial AI companies

Head of Partnerships / Channel

The company works with local IT service providers on sovereign AI models across the Gulf. Someone needs to build and manage these channel partnerships across UAE, Saudi Arabia, and Qatar. Understanding of regional technology procurement and sovereign data requirements is essential.

Candidate criteria:

- Has built channel partnerships between Western technology companies and Gulf/African IT service providers or system integrators
- Understands sovereign AI requirements and local data residency constraints
- Has navigated government procurement and sovereign entity relationships
- Rolodex in Dubai, Riyadh, Abu Dhabi, Doha, or major African business hubs
- Comfortable with long relationship-building cycles and cultural nuance
- Comes from the enterprise AI, industrial tech, or supply chain technology space

Marketing Lead (B2B / Deep Tech)

Post-stealth, the company needs to control its narrative. The pitch — “mathematically verified agents” — is unusual and requires a marketer who can translate category theory into boardroom language without dumbing it down. Content strategy, analyst relations, and event presence across MENA and Europe.

Candidate criteria:

- Can make unfamiliar technology feel inevitable rather than exotic
- Has marketed to C-suite at industrial companies, conglomerates, or sovereign entities
- Understands regulatory-driven demand as a wedge into enterprise deals

- Experience building a category (not just marketing within an existing one)
- Can translate mathematical or deeply technical concepts for executives
- Has worked at early-stage deep tech companies (not just mature SaaS)

Customer Success Manager

The platform is deployed across multiple facilities for the client in Saudi Arabia, covering supply chain optimisation, production monitoring, and governance. With a small number of large customers, keeping each reference account ecstatic is existential — every future deal will ask “can I talk to your existing customer?” Needs supply chain domain awareness and comfort working across cultures.

Candidate criteria:

- Manages a small number of high-value enterprise accounts (not self-serve SaaS)
 - Experience with multi-facility industrial deployments (manufacturing, supply chain, production monitoring)
 - Understands cross-cultural enterprise relationships, especially Gulf business culture
 - Has managed complex onboarding involving supply chain, procurement, or production systems
 - Comfortable being the primary relationship holder with C-suite sponsors
 - Domain knowledge in supply chain, manufacturing, or logistics

Near-Term (as pipeline grows)

Solutions Architect / Pre-Sales Engineer

Bridges the gap between the company’s mathematics and a prospect’s supply chain reality. Technical enough to demo the platform, commercial enough to scope a deal. Likely the most cross-functional hire on this list.

Business Development Representative (BDR)

Outbound prospecting into target conglomerates across the Gulf, Africa, India, and Europe. Research-heavy work: mapping conglomerate org charts to find the founder or key decision-maker. Not a cold-calling role; more investigative.

Regulatory / Compliance Specialist

EU Digital Product Passport goes live July 2026. CBAM is in its transitional phase. Battery passports mandatory February 2027; steel, textiles, electronics, and furniture follow through 2030. Someone who understands EU regulatory timelines and can map them to customer urgency. This role is effectively a sales weapon — quantifying “you will lose EU market access by date X” for each prospect.

Head of Operations / Chief of Staff

Team has expanded 4x since stealth. Someone needs to keep the trains running — hiring, finance, board prep, investor relations. Ideally experienced in scaling early-stage deep tech companies.

Growth Stage

Regional Sales Managers (Africa, India, Southeast Asia)

Target regions with conglomerate structure but weak technical infrastructure. Each region has distinct dynamics: African conglomerates, Indian conglomerates, Southeast Asian family businesses. Separate hires per region.

Content / Thought Leadership Writer

The moat is mathematical. Publishing papers, case studies, and explainers that make “directed container composition” feel inevitable rather than exotic. Must be able to work closely with technical staff and produce material credible to both academics and enterprise buyers.

Domain Expert — Supply Chain

Someone who has actually run supply chain operations at a conglomerate or large manufacturer. Provides credibility in the room when selling to a prospect’s logistics and procurement teams. Understands ERP systems, compliance workflows, and the pain points that the platform addresses.

Finance / Grants Manager

Active grant funding and university partnerships, plus an early funding round — someone to manage the financial side and pursue further grant funding (Innovate UK, Horizon Europe, regional development funds). Deep tech companies often under-invest in grant capture, leaving significant non-dilutive funding on the table.

Strategic Notes

1. Hiring sequence matters. The go-to-market is founder-led sales into conglomerates — a tiny number of very large deals. The first sales hire must be a closer who can sit with a conglomerate executive, not a BDR generating MQLs. The BDR comes later once there is a repeatable pitch.
2. Regulatory urgency is a sales accelerant. A compliance specialist who can quantify “you will lose EU market access by February 2027” is not a back-office hire — they are part of the sales motion.
3. Channel partnerships before direct sales in the Gulf. The sovereign AI angle means local IT providers are the trusted channel. A Head of Partnerships may deliver more revenue than a second salesperson.

4. The mathematics is the moat — and the marketing challenge. Every external-facing hire needs to be comfortable with the fact that the product's differentiator is a mathematical proof, not a feature comparison chart. Hiring people who find this exciting (rather than intimidating) is a filter in itself.
